The coolie traffic has been attracting a great deal of attention at home; and unfortunately it cannot be denied that the regulations which have been in force at Macao have not been sufficient to do away with its abuses. We do not believe that either the Governor or the other authorities at that place are to a very great extent responsible for this, as irregularities and abuses are simply inseparable from the coolie trade, and seem incapable of being put down by any preventive measures so long as the present system of emigration Johannesberg were sang with great effect. continues. Still the subject has attracted so much attention at home that it is not improbable the Government at Lisbon have felt Possiet and Shadwell, &c., &c., being among discontented with the continuation of complaints, and may have been influenced unfavourably in respect to the present Governor, arrival of the Governor, and party "God on account of his not having been able at eave the Queen "was played, followed by the all events to prevent the subject having ing through both, public prominence. If the Portuguese authorities were influenced by such views, it must be owned that they were not without some cause, as the unfortunate action which the Governor of Macao adopted in granting permission to ship coolies to Costa Rica, where they are without any proper protection, gave serious grounds for renewed com- at breakfast on the morning of the 16th. Some few months ago, it will be recollected an attempt was made to organise Philharmonic Society in Hongkong, but the project had to be abandoned in consequence of the difficulty of finding reed players. No one, however, appears to have been aware of the fac that, as a make shift, the parts can be very well played on separate harmoniques, and that smal harmoniums voiced like any reed instrument are specially made in London for this purpose. The Shanghai Philharmonic Society when first started was also very short in reeds, and some of the reed parts had to be taken by the flutes, but by degrees when the thing was fairly set going reed players were forthcoming. Act on Protest. This was an action entered by the owners of junk against the M. M. stenmer Phase, for damages for a collision which occurred near Whampon, in which the junk's must was carried away and other damage was done. The appearsuce on behalf of the Messageries Muritimes was under protest.

THE "PHASE."

The Queen's Advocate appeared for the impugnants, and Mr. Hayllar for the promotents. In support of the protest, the Queen's Advocate said that as the cause of action arose near Whampon, and the promovents were Canton people, they had a cheap and simple remedy in the Mixed Court at Canton, where the Messageries would be perfectly willing to meet them. The Company never objected to the jurisdiction of this Court in cases of collision ou the high seas, or wherever the action was a proper one to be tried in that Court, but here they thought the proper jurisdiction was a stricting M. Thiers from speaking in the As. | Conton, and they therefore thought it right to object, if they could legally do so, to the jurisdiction of this Court. The Queen's Advocate said the cases seemed to show that it would. As this question was a very interesting one to the public, and important for the Court to decide, he should mention selves to him on the subject, although they were against him to a great extent There was just one point on which he had ad vised his clients to obtain a decision from the Court. In 1861 was pussed an Act extending the jurisdiction of the High Court of Adm rulty, to which be should some presently. Be fors that Act, however, it seemed to be doubt ful whether the Admiralty jurisdiction extend ed to foreign shire in foreign waters, and at all events the Court of Admiralty seemed reluctant to entertain enits so arising. But by the Act of 1861 the jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court was extended to these cases, the 7th section giving it inriadiction to try any cause of damage by env ship. The decisions on that section with regard to causes of action ariging in fuland waters were conclusive. In the case of the Diana, there was a collision in the Great North Holland Canal. There the Court exereised jurisdiction. That was a case of inland foreign waters. The next was the case of the Malvina, which was taken to the Privy Council. That was a case in which the danings was done in Blackwall Reach. ships being clearly of opinion that the intention of the Act was to give the Court the atmost extent of jurisdiction. These however were both oness of British ships. The next one. that of the Courier, showed that the same jurisdiction existed over foreign yeasels in foreign waters, the collision here having taken place I the port of Rio Grande. Dr. Lushington held that it was immaterial that the owners of both ships were foreigners; the Court had jurisdiction. He might mention also the American boy, named Tang-a-yenck; with attempting to case of Smith v. CHICAGO, November 15th: One of the editorial staff of the Chicago Evening Journal, now in Boston, telegraphs to that paper to-day as follows: "I have intimated that the public sentiment is averse to accepting offers of money from other cities at this time. The Globe of yesterday morning expresses itself as opposed to the action of the Relief Committee voting to accept aid. The Advertiser is mildly opposed to the resolution of acceptance, and the Transcript publishes its nonconcurrance this morning. The Globe in an elaborate leader comes out flat footed upon men, who, it says, would make Boston a beggar from the whole Union, and publishes several letters from various citizens in support of its comments. The Globe says the Committee, in assuming to speak for the citizens of Boston Shanghai Steam Navigation Company_Tla. 30 by publishing to the world their resolutions the Union will be gratefully accepted, is nothing more than a direct advertisement that the Hongkong Rotel Company's Shares-45 per great, proud and wealthy capital of New England is in poverty and distress, and a subject of Hongkong Distillery Company-10 per cent general charity. Boston, at this day, and notwithstanding the fire, is receiving an income of Indo-Chinese Sugar Company-$70 per chare over seven million dollars, and to say that ; community thus circumstanced cannot succour Hongkong Pier and Godown Company .- 324 its own poor and needy without receiving charity from abroad is absolutely abourd. Where is the honest pride, the fair fame, the integrity of our good old city, when she is made to stand On London .like a beggar, with pockets filled with money and scourities, cap in hand, and soliciting charity from passers by ! It also says that Mayor Gaston has proved himself unequal to the situation, and these self-constituted solicitors for charity for Boston bave grossly misrepresented the sentiment of the city.

The Relief Committee is to be called upon to rescind its action publicly. There is a general feeling that Chief Damrell, of the Fire Department, permitted the fire to spread through carelessness, and an official investigation of the rise and spread of the conflagration is to be instituted. The prospects are that the excitement about the fire has only begun,

CURIOUS CASE OF MARRIAGE

BROKAGE. A curious case-Ireland v. Cruice and Leader -has been heard in the Vice Chancellor's Court, Dublin. It was a suit to set aside a travelling trader, "marriage brokage" bond. THE UNPUNCTUAL SEX.

willing to allow that the fault of non- at the Hospital."-News of the World. punctuality, if it be indeed a fault, is one of a very venial character. The aberrations of the feminine mind, like the movements of the spheres, admit of some approach to calculation: and although the most_experienced observer may sometimes fail to tell what portion of her orbit a lady may occupy at any given hour of the day, he may make a pretty accurate guess sometimes by the aid of the useful rule of contraries.

SOUTHEY AND WORDSWORTH. Southey's poetry seems a beautiful manufacture, not a part of himself. He carries you in it, as in an enchanted cloud, to Arabia, India, or America, to the colestial Meru, to the dolorous depths of Padalon, or to the Domdaniel caves under the roots of the ocean, but he does not seem to entertain you at home, to take you down into himself. He does not seem to be at rest there, or to have there "his abiding city." It is exactly the same in regard to the country in which he lived. He seemed to live there as a stranger and a sojourner. That he loved the lakes and mountains around there can be no question; but has he linked his poetry with them? Has he, like Wordsworth, woven his verse into almost every erevice of every rock? Cast the spell of his enchantment upon every stream? Made the hills, the waters, the hamlets, and the people, part and parcel of his life and his fame? We seek in vain for any such amalgamation. With the exception of the cataract of Lodore, there is scarcely a fairy region where he lived forty years. When Wordsworth died, he left on the mountains, and in all the vales of Cumberland, an everlasting people of his creation. The Wanderer, and the Clergyman of the Excursion, Michael, and Matthew, and the Wagoner, and Peter Bell, Ruth, and many a picturesque vagrant, will linger there for ever. The Shopherd Lord will haunt his ancient hills and castles, and the White Doc Pikes. But when you seek for evidences of being payable on the issue of the Policy. the poetic existence of Southey in Cumberland, you are carried at once to Greta ball, at Keswick, and there you remain .- From "Homes and Haunts of the Most Eminent British Posts," by William Howitt.

He was a universal favourite, but the pranks he sometimes played in his profession alarmed even the least sober among his companions. Amongst his boyish escapades in is related how when his ship once lay off Gib, he used to be selected to command the boat which took a certain blind admiral to and from the shore, and part of his duty consisted in telling the old gentleman whenever an officer saluted him in passing. The trick played upon so important a personage having been discovered, Mr. Midshipman Marryat was transferred to another ship in disgrace; when he piled all his baggage in a boat so as to resemble a coffin, covered it with the Union Jack for a pall, and played the 'Dead March in Saul' on a cornopean as he was conveyed to his new destination. On another occasion he was serving in a ship off Singapore, and not on the best terms with his captain, who, on giving a ball on board omitted Mr. Marryat's name from the list of invitations. On the following day, however, when all the glass and crockery which had been bired for the guests were ready packed to go back on shore, he was the one told off, with malice prepense, to command the boat On receiving the order, Midshipman Fred appeared on deck, slowly and indolently.-Make haste, sir!' cried the indignant captain.
